DIGITAL PROJECTS

Gender Violence Database (<https://talus.artsci.wustl.edu/gvd/#/>)

Developed as part of Washington University’s Humanities Digital Workshop, the Gender Violence Database is an accessible, searchable tool designed for researchers, practitioners, and the general public interested in the multidisciplinary field of gender violence. The database is organized around the principles of evidence-based practice, which highlights the ways that scholarly research, practitioner expertise, and a deep understanding of social and cultural context necessarily shape our approaches to gender violence at all levels of prevention and intervention, from the individual to the political.

Domestic and Sexual Violence Resources- St. Louis (<https://goo.gl/iUh3dM>)

Developed collaboratively between Washington University undergraduates and the St. Louis Family Violence Council, this interactive services map provides updated support services to survivors in the St. Louis area, including public transportation routes. The map is currently a resource provided to survivors by first responders in St. Louis City and County.

TEACHING EXPERIENCE

Washington University

Gender Violence (formerly Violence against Women): Fall 2000, Spring 2002-2022

Course explored current issues and responses to the problem of violence against women, especially rape, incest/childhood sexual abuse, domestic violence, sexual harassment, and pornography. Focused on controversies about the causes and effects of such violence and examined the medical, legal, and sociological discourses surrounding these issues.

Technology and Feminist Practice: Fall 2017, 2019; Spring 2022

Course introduced students to the strategies and challenges of devising technological tools for violence prevention, with an emphasis on the insights and practices of the Digital Humanities.

Community-Engaged Learning: Projects in Domestic Violence: Spring 2004-06, 2008-2022

Course explored the links between the theories and practices of Women and Gender Studies through a combination of research and direct community engagement in which students design and execute programming for women at a local community domestic violence agency.

Domestic Violence Court Project: Spring 2010-14

Course explored the links between theories and practice in the domestic violence field by combining classroom lecture/discussion with students’ participation as observers and advocates in the St. Louis County Domestic Violence Court program.

An Intellectual History of Sex and Gender: Spring 2010, 2011, 2015, 2017, 2020

Course explored the history of constructions of gender and sexuality from Sappho to Simone deBeauvoir, focusing on shifting historical frameworks for understanding masculinity, femininity, and desire in literary works, treatises, and scientific studies.

Women’s Issues: Social Welfare and Social Work: Fall 2011-18 (Brown School of Social Work)

Course addresses the challenges of social work practice with women, with special emphasis on the context of intersectional identity. Focused on domestic violence, the politics of medicalized childbirth, incarcerated women, and the gendered consequences of US drug policies.

The Intellectual History of Mass Incarceration: Fall 2018 (team-taught with Geoff Ward)

Seminar explored the intellectual history of the modern-day prison, focusing on historical shifts, political logics, and ideological developments that defined the physical space of the prison, criminalized marginalized populations, and enabled the emergence of criminology as a discipline.

Resistance in the Renaissance: Fall 2020 (team-taught with Christine Johnson)

Course examined why and how people in early modern Europe and its empires stood up to those in power, focusing especially on the roles of performance, literature, and political philosophy in animating and shaping their resistance.

Introduction to Women, Gender, and Sexuality Studies: Spring 2005-2007, Fall 2012-2021

Course introduced students to key concepts, debates, and theoretical developments in Women and Gender studies, including the history of feminism, gender identity and socialization, economic systems of oppression, intersectionality, and violence against women.

Chief English Writers I/ Early Texts and Contexts: Fall 2000, Spring 2001, Fall 2001, Spring 2002, Fall 2003, 2007, 2011, 2013, Spring 2014, Fall 2016

Course examined major works of early English literature, including selections from Chaucer's Canterbury Tales and Spenser's Faerie Queene and Amoretti, Shakespeare's Taming of the Shrew and Sonnets, and Milton's Paradise Lost. Lectures and four essay assignments emphasized practice in the close reading of texts.

Text and Tradition: Classical Literature: Fall 2001-2016; 2019-2021; Spring 2021

Course addressed the basic questions of liberal education, especially those of why the classics ought to be studied and why Western culture has come to value these basic questions. Texts included Homer's Iliad, Aeschylus' Oresteia, Virgil's Aeneid, Dante's Inferno, Augustine's Confessions, and Shakespeare's Antony and Cleopatra.

Introduction to Writing about Literature: Summer 2004-2020

Course introduced incoming freshmen to various forms of college-level writing and literary interpretation. Texts included fiction, non-fiction, drama, poetry, and theory, and assignments emphasized literary analysis and revision.

Shakespeare Survey: Fall 2000, Spring 2001-2002, Fall 2002-2010; 2014-2015; 2018; 2021

Course surveyed several of Shakespeare's plays, including A Midsummer Night's Dream, The Taming of the Shrew, Merchant of Venice, As You Like It, Romeo and Juliet, Henry IV, pt. 1, Othello, Hamlet, Henry V, and The Winter's Tale, with particular attention to practice in close reading and to generic evolution.

Introduction to Renaissance Drama: Fall 2012

Course explored the development of early modern English drama from its emergence in the late sixteenth century to the closing of the theaters in 1642 with particular attention to the social and political contexts of the public stage and to the ways that the drama participated in shaping ideas about gender, class, desire, power, and city life in the period.

Advanced Shakespeare Course: Sexuality and Gender in Shakespeare's Plays: Fall 00, Summer 04

Designed to encourage close study of Shakespeare's plays in light of recent critical conversations about sexuality and gender. Course focused on the challenges faced in applying current critical perspectives in the field early modern studies—new historicism, queer theory, early modern race studies, and psychoanalytic criticism—to six of Shakespeare's plays.

(team-taught with Donna Northcott, Artistic Director of the St. Louis Shakespeare Company)

Course examined five of Shakespeare's plays—Othello, Macbeth, Richard III, Twelfth Night, and Pericles—both as literary and as performance texts, paying particular attention to the interplay between the page and the stage. Along with discussions of the plays within their historical, political, and cultural contexts, the course explored the choices that get made in adapting Shakespeare's plays for 21st century audiences and the kinds of tensions that exist between critical accounts and dramaturgical interpretations.

Introduction to Composition: Spring 2000

Developed syllabus focusing on practice in critical reading and writing skills. Used a progression of five essay assignments, all requiring revision, to introduce college writing skills, including summary, identifying underlying assumptions, comparison/contrast, and library research.
